

American Society for Reconstructive Microsurgery Visiting Professor Program Request to Host Visiting Professor

The ASRM Visiting Professor Program highlights the fantastic work of microsurgeons and ASRM members as well as the diversity associated with a practice involving microsurgery and complex reconstruction. Hosting a visiting professor promotes early exposure of medical students and young surgeons to the field of microsurgery to education and potentially interests them in a career involving microsurgery.

ASRM members will be selected to participate in this program each year based on applications received. Visiting Professors will be provided up to $5,000 to cover flight and transportation to and from the host institution. The host institution is responsible for paying the remaining costs including hotel, meals and local transportation. Travels dates are worked out directly between the visiting professor and program.

Traveling professors are longstanding and actively participating members of the ASRM. There may be more requests to host an ASRM Traveling Professor than opportunities to travel. If your program does not have the privilege of hosting an ASRM Visiting Professor, we encourage you to submit your interest to host the following year.
